

Stefano Donato

I was born in Japan to Italian parents in 1966. After living in Italy and Kenya until 1971, I grew up in Pordenone, in North-Eastern Italy. I studied Medicine at the University of Padua and Anaesthesia at the University of Udine, where I subsequently worked, completing my final year of training in Geneva, Switzerland.

I have participated in several humanitarian missions abroad with different NGOs and subsequently established a collaboration with the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). I later moved to Australia and then to the UK, where I worked in the public healthcare sector. Since 2004, I have been based in Italy, working within the Italian National Health Service (SSN), with most of my career dedicated to Cardiac Anaesthesia. Throughout the years, I have continued my involvement with NGOs and the ICRC.

I currently work full-time at S. Rosa Hospital in Viterbo, Italy, and part-time in London. I have a particular interest in Minimal Flow Anaesthesia and have delivered presentations and contributed to conference abstracts on the subject.
